Introduction

The most popular drink in Europe is the espresso¹. To this end it would be interesting to the European population (and coffee loving globetrotters worldwide for that matter) to know where they should go in order to experience the widest variety of coffee shops.

Coffee shops are important to societal function in Europe as they serve several functions. Not only are they a good place to get some very important rehydration, they are vibrant social hubs and fantastic working environments.

Data Analysis

I will leverage the Foursquare API to gain a list of the coffee shops in a list of European capitals taken from Wikipedia. I will then use clustering to determine the coffee drinking hotspots in the city with the highest number of results.

The cities with the most coffee shops will be presented on a bar chart, with the most coffee rich city being presented on a map.
